Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, Spain,
a hub for relations with Africa

Welcome message

Alfonso Dastis

Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation

In recent years, Preventive Diplomacy has cemented its position as one of the key tools for guaranteeing peace, stability and prosperity in Africa. Detecting flash points before they lead to open conflict—and before conflicts, in turn, lead to outbreaks of violence—is not only a moral duty by which we are all bound, it is also the best way to save lives, prevent personal tragedies and halt fracturing of societies that takes years to heal.

Spain is fully aware of the tremendous value of Preventive Diplomacy, and we support all of the efforts of the new Secretary-General of the United Nations, Antonio Guterres, to strengthen diplomacy for peace and conflict prevention. This work is based on a foundation of discretion and foresight—deeply rooted in familiarity with African society and political structures—requiring that prominent African public figures bring to bear all of their commitment, leadership and charisma.

In tandem with the development of early warning systems and Preventive Diplomacy mechanisms, we have seen a strengthening of African multilateralism. Under the umbrella of the African Union, subregional economic organizations render an invaluable service to the continent's stability and growth. The African Peace and Security Architecture (APSA) and Agenda 2063 are merely two examples of just how much Africa can do on its own. These efforts are supported by both the United Nations and the European Union.

At this international meeting, our aim has been to give the opportunity to speak primarily to senior representatives of African multilateral organizations, for two reasons. Firstly, we are aware that their Preventive Diplomacy work is often overshadowed by its own success, because when a conflict is prevented the impact in the media is minimalised. Secondly, we know that Preventive Diplomacy requires material and financial resources, although it is of course less costly than a peacebuilding or peacekeeping mission. We must therefore discuss how we can enhance the effectiveness of such instruments.

This day of debate will be inaugurated by the Vice-President of the Government of Spain, Mrs Saénz de Santamaría and hosted by Casa Africa, a public diplomacy tool dedicated to reinforcing ties with the African continent. The proximity of the Canary Islands—a source of much mutual wealth and understanding for Spain and the countries of Western Africa—has given rise to a dense network of political, economic, social and cultural ties that are perfectly integrated into Spain's foreign policy framework.

Las Palmas de Gran Canaria is therefore an ideal location to discuss Preventive Diplomacy and to renew our commitment to the present and the future of Africa. In today's globalized world of shared challenges, this also represents a commitment to the present and the future of us all.

I wish everyone a very productive day.

Goal of the Conference

Traditionally, primary responsibility for preventing conflicts has fallen to States; however, international organizations are playing an increasingly important role in peacekeeping and peacebuilding around the world. International, regional and sub-regional organizations promote a comprehensive approach and have Preventive Diplomacy tools at their disposal that contribute to early warnings and regional stability.

The United Nations, the only universal organization, has underscored that conflict prevention must be its utmost priority for the coming years.

Conflict prevention and peacebuilding in Sub-Saharan Africa unquestionably represent the greatest challenge faced by the international community. The conflicts that have ravaged Africa over the past decade are well known; nonetheless, peaceful transitions of power, good governance and democratic development are becoming more and more widespread. The future offers opportunities to bring together development, democratization and stability, whilst proactively using diplomacy and other tools for conflict prevention.

The meeting in Las Palmas will focus on the role that regional and sub-regional organizations currently play and how their role can be expanded, as well as the function of civil society; the meeting will also centre on women's organizations and movements, which are making important contributions to change in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Now more than ever, the international community must strive to work together to prevent conflicts, uniting the efforts of States, international organizations and civil society.

It is crucial that we work together and cooperate on diplomacy for peace. The challenge that Sub-Saharan Africa is facing is precisely this: combining forces. The meeting in Las Palmas is an urgent call to seek effective means of achieving this ambitious goal.

CASA ÁFRICA

Africa and Spain, ever closer

CASA ÁFRICA CONSORTIUM

Casa África organises activities primarily economic in nature, but also institutional, social and cultural, always with the intention of developing long lasting relations between Spain and Africa. Its work is defined by a dual purpose: firstly, to raise awareness in African countries of our priorities in key sectors; secondly, to make the people of Spain aware of the realities of Africa.

The key to public diplomacy is the ability to communicate and form alliances. We pursue transparent communication that projects our values and interests as well as open dialogue with the world at large in pursuit of synergies and common agendas.

Casa África facilitates face-to-face meetings between Spaniards and Africans, underscored by the conviction that the mutual knowledge, understanding and trust that this engenders is what, at the end of the day, makes a difference. Partnerships with research centres that specialise in Africa are another constant priority of the consortium.

In recent times Casa África has significantly increased its support for strategic studies by the most prestigious and relevant think tanks in Spain, Africa and the rest of the world. The goals are the same: to build Spanish-African relations and common agendas and, within the framework of public diplomacy, to contribute to the dissemination of new knowledge, develop new insights and convey them to the general public.

Casa África was founded in June 2006 and is located in Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, Spain. It is a public consortium integrated by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation, the Government of the Canary Islands and the Town Council of Las Palmas de Gran Canaria. It is part of the Spanish public diplomacy network of Casas, alongside Casa de América, Casa Árabe, Casa Asia, Casa Mediterráneo and Centro Sefarad-Israel.

LAS PALMAS DE GRAN CANARIA

Las Palmas de Gran Canaria is the most cosmopolitan city of the Canaries and one of the cities with the best weather in the world thanks to its exceptional location with an average temperature of 17°C in winter and 25°C in summer.

The capital has well differentiated areas: the historic old town and the port area, not forgetting the upper part of town. But Las Palmas de Gran Canaria is especially known for the Canteras Beach, one of the most recognised urban beaches in Europe. The Port of Las Palmas, La Luz Port, has also contributed to the city's character and its relevance due to its steady flow of people, goods and services. It is also the welcoming entrance to the city for tourism cruises with around 800,000 visitors every year.

Las Palmas de Gran Canaria shows the historic traces of the footsteps of kings, explorers and distinguished visitors through the historic neighbourhoods of Triana and Vegueta. Strolling around the colonial-style streets of Vegueta is like travelling to the past of a city with more than five centuries of history, a city that has witnessed the passage of historical characters like Christopher Columbus, a city that has suffered the greed of pirates from foreign lands due to its strategic location.

GASTRONOMY

Goat meat, pork, veal and not forgetting chicken and rabbit are the meats used in Gran Canaria cuisine. For fish, the most typical is 'cherne', a delicious whitefish, but also grouper, sea bass, old red "vieja" and tuna are the ones to look out for, as fresh fish will not be lacking on any good table at many coastal restaurants.

Gran Canaria produces a wide variety of cheeses, with flavours and textures that vary depending on the area of the island. They are both industrially produced and farmhouse cheeses, made with milk of goats, cows, sheep or mixing various types, and the climatic characteristics of each area give them their particularities.
